

What Is This?

This is the Lettuce, Turnip, The Beet weekly menu for the week of June 22. This week's dinner lineup is below. Fruit and add-on items are available every week. Want to see everything I can make? Just ask for the full menu.

How to Order

Just send a text to 512-417-1886 with your order and I'll take it from there. Orders for this week are due by Tuesday night, for delivery on Wednesday, June 25. A $2.00 per order surcharge helps cover cleaning supplies and water use. Tips are always appreciated but absolutely never expected.

A Note From Your Chef

Here's the thing about meal prep: almost nobody designs for the moment you actually eat it. They design for the photo, or for fresh-out-of-the-pan, and leave you to deal with whatever it becomes by the end of the week. I don't work that way. Every dish on this menu earns its spot by answering one question first: will this still be great a few days from now? If the honest answer is no, it doesn't make the cut. Everything else, the sourcing, the technique, the long way when the long way matters, is just what it takes to get there. I'd rather you eat something restaurant-quality days after delivery than something that was only good for the first ten minutes. Thanks for letting me cook for you.

A Note On Bagged Dishes

A few dishes on this menu arrive fully cooked but sealed in a bag instead of a container, not because it's fancy, just because it reheats better. (This is different from the "Ready to Finish" section later, where you do the final cooking yourself.) To reheat: bring a separate pot of water to a gentle simmer, drop the bag in, and let it sit for a few minutes while you handle everything else, then cut it open and plate. No special equipment needed. Don't have a spare pot? A shallow pan works too. Just keep the bag fully submerged, and a couple of wooden chopsticks laid in the bottom make a nice buffer if you're worried about it sitting directly on the hot surface. Microwave or stovetop still work fine if you'd rather, they just won't give quite the same result.

■ Dinner

Shrimp or Tofu with Asparagus in Black Bean Sauce

Asparagus and your choice of protein in a savory sauce of soy, Shaoxing wine, fermented black beans, and aromatics. The fermented black beans give it a deep, funky-in-a-good-way backbone that makes it taste like it came out of a good Cantonese kitchen. Choose wild Texas Gulf shrimp, or tofu for a vegetarian version. When the Asian markets have good long beans, this shows up with long beans instead. Same sauce, swapped vegetable.

- Sealed in a bag for the best reheat. See "A Note On Bagged Dishes" up front.
- Uncooked rice included. Cook fresh for best results, and just ask if you need a hand.

$40.00 – Shrimp, Small Batch (~3–4 servings)	~$10.00–$13.33 / serving
$75.00 – Shrimp, Large Batch (~7–8 servings)	~$9.38–$10.71 / serving
$25.00 – Tofu, Small Batch (~3–4 servings)	~$6.25–$8.33 / serving
$45.00 – Tofu, Large Batch (~7–8 servings)	~$5.63–$6.43 / serving

Contains: Shellfish if ordering shrimp. Soy (tofu) if ordering tofu (vegetarian). Gluten (soy sauce, Shaoxing wine).

Thai Basil Chicken (Pad Krapow Gai)

Ground chicken hit hard and fast in the wok with garlic, asparagus, Thai basil, and a sauce of oyster sauce, soy, and fish sauce. Fragrant, savory, and a little spicy.

- Sealed in a bag for the best reheat. See "A Note On Bagged Dishes" up front.
- Uncooked rice included. Cook fresh for best results, and just ask if you need a hand.

$30.00 – Small (~3–4 servings)

~$7.50–$10.00 / serving

$55.00 – Large (~7–8 servings)

~$6.88–$7.86 / serving

Contains: Gluten (oyster sauce, soy sauce), Fish (fish sauce), Shellfish (oyster sauce).

Saffron Pork Ragu

Ground pork slow-cooked with fennel, saffron, sherry, and tomato until it's deep and a little luxurious. The saffron does its quiet thing in the background and the whole thing comes together rich without being heavy.

- Uncooked pasta included. Cook fresh for best results, and let me know what pasta you'd like.
- Also excellent over polenta, though polenta isn't included. I may offer it as an add-on down the road.
- Want a little background heat? I can work a small amount of chili into the sauce at no extra charge. Just ask.

Note: happy to grab you a block of good parm at cost (about $10–15 extra) if you want to grate fresh over the top. Just ask.

$40.00 – (~4 servings)

~$10.00 / serving

Contains: Dairy.

Mapo Eggplant

Chinese eggplant and ground chicken in a sauce built on doubanjiang and chili oil, cooked down until the eggplant goes silky and soaks up everything around it. Numbing, spicy, and savory all at once. Made for rice.

- This one comes in a container, not a bag. To reheat, warm it in a large saucepan over medium, and add a splash of water if it looks a little thin.
- Uncooked rice included. Cook fresh for best results, and just ask if you need a hand.

SPICE: Spice level is about a 3 out of 5, and this one can't be dialed down.

$35.00 – (~5–6 servings)

~$5.83–$7.00 / serving

Contains: Gluten (soy sauce, doubanjiang), Soy (doubanjiang).

Gumbo

A proper roux-based gumbo, cooked dark and slow with chicken thighs, boudin, the holy trinity, and a good amount of patience. This is the one that takes all day, and it tastes like it. Made for rice.

- Note: the minimum batch size is the Large, so the Small option is only available when splitting a Large batch between multiple orders.
- Uncooked rice included. Cook fresh for best results, and just ask if you need a hand.

$40.00 – Small (split order, ~3–4 servings)

~$10.00–$13.33 / serving

$65.00 – Large (~7–8 servings)

~$8.13–$9.29 / serving

Contains: Gluten (flour), check with me on boudin casing.

Ready to Finish

These come cooked ahead of time and finished by you at home: a quick sear on the proteins, a fast reheat on the vegetables. A few minutes of hands-on work, and the result is worth it.

What Is Sous Vide?

Sous vide (pronounced "soo veed," French for "under vacuum") is a cooking method where food is sealed in an airtight bag and cooked in a precisely temperature-controlled water bath. Because the water stays at one exact temperature the whole time, the food cooks perfectly and evenly all the way through, with no overcooked edges and no undercooked center. For this menu, that means your protein arrives already cooked to the perfect point, and all you have to do is add a quick sear for color and crust, or a fast reheat for vegetables.

A Note On the Bags

All bags used for these items are BPA-free and food-safe for sous vide cooking and freezer storage. Once you're done, feel free to toss them, no need to return these ones. Trying to cut down on single-use plastic? There's a reusable option for regulars, so ask me about it and we'll sort out the details.

A Note On Seasoning

Every bag, proteins and vegetables alike, is seasoned with salt, sugar, fresh thyme, and butter before cooking. The sugar isn't there to make things sweet. On the proteins it works with the salt to form a light dry brine that helps them hold moisture and brown better, and on the vegetables it draws out their natural sweetness. More seasoning and flavor options are coming soon. If you have a dairy restriction, please let me know before ordering.

Contains: Dairy (butter)

Finishing Your Protein

Remove the protein from the bag and pat it very dry with a paper towel, this is the key to a great crust. Get a pan blazing hot with a neutral, high-smoke-point oil (skip the extra virgin olive oil here), then sear hard on each side just until deeply browned. Thicker cuts (ribeye, NY strip, filet, pork tenderloin) benefit from sitting out on the counter for 15–20 minutes before searing so they're not ice-cold going into the pan. Thinner cuts (chicken breast) can go straight from the fridge to the pan.

All steaks are sous vide to 131°F (medium rare) and the pork tenderloin to 140°F (medium). Everything within a batch is cooked together at one temperature, so the sear at the end is where you dial in more color and char if you prefer things less pink in the center.

Optional: Whipped Lemon Garlic Herb Butter

Any sous vide protein can come with a container of whipped lemon, garlic, and herb butter to melt over the top right after searing. It turns a good piece of meat into something that tastes like it came out of a restaurant kitchen. Highly recommended on the steaks and the pork.

+ $2.00 per container

Ribeye

The well-marbled one. All that fat means it stays rich and tender even after a quick sear at home.

- + $1.50 per bag cost + seasonings

$25.00/lb

New York Strip

Leaner than the ribeye but still plenty beefy. A good middle ground if you want flavor without all the fat.

- + $1.50 per bag cost + seasonings

$23.00/lb

Filet Mignon

The most tender cut there is. Mild and buttery, so it leans on the sear and seasoning for flavor.

- + $1.50 per bag cost + seasonings

$34.00/lb

Pork Tenderloin

Lean, mild, and quick to cook, the tenderloin takes really well to a hard sear. Cooked to a perfect 140°F medium so it stays juicy, not dried out the way pork usually ends up. Sold per loin, about 1.25 pounds each.

- + $1.50 per bag cost + seasonings
- Cooked to 140°F (medium), in its own batch separate from the steaks.

$15.00/lb (about $18.75 per loin)

Boneless Skinless Chicken Breast

Cooked sous vide so it's actually juicy all the way through, then it just needs a quick sear at home for color. No more dry, overcooked chicken breast.

- + $1.50 per bag cost + seasonings

$9.00/lb

Finishing Your Vegetables

Place the sealed bag in a pot of simmering water for a few minutes to reheat. Once warmed through, carefully cut the bag open and pour out the liquid. From there you have two options: simply plate the vegetables as-is, or if you have a few extra minutes, pour that liquid into a small pan and reduce it down into a glaze, then spoon it back over the vegetables before serving.

Baby Gold Potatoes

Tender baby gold potatoes, seasoned and ready to glaze. Two servings per bag.

- Single-serving portions available by request

$7.00 – 2 servings

Carrots

Sweet, tender carrots, seasoned and ready to glaze. Two servings per bag.

- Single-serving portions available by request

$6.00 – 2 servings

Desserts

Chocolate Chip Cookies

Made with two kinds of chocolate for a cookie with real depth of flavor. Brown butter, molasses, and a touch of patience.

Note: Yes, I know the premium ones are expensive. But have you seen chocolate prices lately? That Valrhona is $30 a pound. It's worth it.

$25.00 – 1 Dozen (Standard Guittard Chocolate)

~$2.08 per cookie

$40.00 – 1 Dozen (Premium Valrhona Chocolate)

~$3.33 per cookie

Contains: Gluten, Dairy, Eggs.

Peanut Butter Fudge

Grandma's recipe. That's all you need to know.

$15.00 – 1 Batch

Contains: Dairy, Peanuts.

+ Add-Ons & Extras

Fresh Cut Pineapple

Freshly cut and ready to eat.

$6.00 – Per Container

Seasonal Cantaloupe

Seasonal melon, cut and ready to eat. Right now that means specialty cantaloupe varieties like Sugar Kiss are in season, sweeter and more fragrant than the standard grocery-store stuff, which I don't bother with. Whatever's best that week is what's going in the container.

$6.00 – Per Container

Queso

Slow-developed flavors that put store-bought to shame. Sold by the pint. Made in large batches and freezes very well, so your jar may arrive frozen. Testimonial from a friend: "This is the best drunk food I've ever had...it literally saved my life."

SPICE: Spice level: No Heat, Medium (1 habanero), or Hot (2 habaneros). Extra heat available on request.

$12.00 – Per Pint Jar

$10.00 – With jar swap (see The Loop)

Contains: Dairy.

Pickled Onions or Carrots

Bright, tangy, and the perfect finishing touch on just about anything. Made in-house and packed in a pint mason jar.

$7.50 – Standard

$5.50 – With jar swap (see The Loop)

Chili Oil

House-made chili oil with five spice, Sichuan peppercorns, toasted sesame, star anise, and fresh ginger. Put it on everything, and I do mean everything. Seriously, try it on eggs.

$10.00 – Per Jar

$8.00 – With jar swap (see The Loop)

Thyme or Lavender Syrup

Simple syrup steeped with fresh thyme or lavender. Perfect for cocktails, lemonade, or sparkling water.

$7.00 – Per Jar

$5.00 – With jar swap (see The Loop)

Vanilla Syrup

Rich vanilla syrup made with house-made vanilla extract and vanilla beans. The good stuff.

$12.00 – Per Jar

$10.00 – With jar swap (see The Loop)

Vanilla Lavender Syrup

The best of both worlds, vanilla and lavender together. Elegant and versatile.

$13.00 – Per Jar

$11.00 – With jar swap (see The Loop)
